OH, FOR A HOLE TO CRAWL INTO!—Fancy your Junior on a spot like this. Duked up in velvet trousers and beruffled silk blouse, four-year-old Nicholas Goodman had to stand and "take it" from the razzing gang behind him. Young Nicholas was saddled with the fancy-pants outfit when he was a page boy at the recent wedding in London, England, of Actress Jill Raymond and Clement Freud, grandson of psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud. Blimey! It's enough to give a chap a complex.

"NORTHCOTT'S a supreme ego-list," Gil Summerfield went on seriously. "He's convinced he can put anything across no matter how ticklish it is. He'd set his heart on owning Frey & Company, because he honestly believes in it, and he wasn't going to let anything stop him. He knew that I'd known your family for years and he knew the whole situation about—about your father. It was risky, but he thought he could swing us all into line. He believes implicitly in his power to dominate people. That's probably why he told you he controlled Jeff's shares before he actually did. And I guess he thought he could dominate me, too, but he certainly put me in a tight spot."

"You mean because of—of Jeff?" Ede asked reluctantly.

Gil looked away. "Yes. Because of Jeff. We had a talk, Ede. I'm pretty dumb about business, but I gathered that this was supposed to be a cozy little get-together between the three of us. And I also gathered that you weren't to know anything about it—yet."

"But you saw me that night," Ede said, almost accusingly. "And you didn't say a word."

He spread his hands. "How could I? Listen, when I found out that it was Frey & Company Northcott had in mind, and that Jeff was involved in it, was on the point of getting out of the thing altogether. But then I reconsidered. I—'he paused, his face darkening. "This isn't too easy, Ede."

"I'll help you," Ede said. "You knew that Jeff was having pressure put on him to sell us out. You thought he was pretty sure to do it. And you decided to buy his shares, rather than let someone else get them. Wouldn't that about cover it?" She shook his arm slightly.

Brookwood PTA
Plans Puppet Show
The Brookwood P. T. A. held its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday, October 11, at the school. The business session was presided over by the president Mrs. Delton Houston.

Mrs. Leon Davis, leader of the program introduced Mrs. Roy Taylor, and Mrs. Hubert Thrash, who in turn gave interesting reports on the "Birthright of Opportunity to Grow to Adult Hood in a Good Home."

Attractive yearbooks were made and distributed by Mrs. Dick Watkins, vice president. Tentative plans were made for a puppet show to be held in early spring. There were 104 members, and parents present for the meeting.

Mrs. C. S. Lowthorpe
Reports on UDC
State Convention
The October meeting of the Pat Cleburne chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. W. G. Allison, with Mrs. Jerome Smith, Mrs. J. F. Gorin and Mrs. S. C. Lowthorpe co-hostesses.

The Allison home was attractively decorated with many lovely arrangements of dahlias and roses. The meeting was opened with the president, Mrs. C. S. Lowthorpe presiding. Mrs. Gus Haynes led the group in reciting the ritual and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Mrs. Pat Casey, secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting. Mrs. J. M. Duffie read the treasurer's report.

Highlights of the State Convention held in the Fountain room of the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs was given by Mrs. C. S. Lowthorpe. Mrs. Lowthorpe gave a report of the Hope chapter at this convention. A concise report was given by Mrs. A. E. Slusser, and Mrs. J. W. Branch, who were also delegates to the convention.

The chapter flag, a handwork of Mrs. J. W. Branch, was displayed and attractive yearbooks were distributed. Mrs. Rosa Shipley Crews read a lovely poem in memory of the late Mrs. Sid Henry of this city.

Mrs. John S. Gibson, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Fred Cook, who in her most gracious manner, presented Miss Henry, guest speaker. Miss Henry, gave an interesting talk on "The Early Days of Hempstead County."

The hostesses served a salad plate with coffee to 32 members and two guests. Mrs. C. C. Bryant and Mrs. Ole Olson.

Shaw Gardens in St. Louis is Theme of Club Program
Mrs. Gordon Bayless and Mrs. J. McMurtry were hostesses to members of the Daughters of the American Revolution at 2 p. m. Thursday at the home of Mrs. Bayless. Attractive yearbooks were distributed to the members.

Mrs. Dorsey Fuller, program chairman, gave an interesting talk on "The Shaw Gardens in St. Louis." It was announced that the next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Lex Helms, Jr., on Thursday, November 30. Delightful refreshments were served to 11 members.

High School P. T. A.
The Hope High School P. T. A. met at 7:30 p. m. on Thursday, October 12, in the High School auditorium, with 74 present. The business session was under the direction of the President, Mrs. Claude Tillery. All committee chairmen made reports. It was reported by Mrs. Irma Dean that the Band Mothers won the room count for the month of September. There are now 137 paid members of the High School P. T. A., a re-

Gil said embarrassedly, "All right. Not that I'm any thin red hero, but I did figure it best for me to appear to play ball. But, naturally, I couldn't—couldn't..."

"Tell me that same evening that Jeff was a louse?"

HE nodded. "I didn't want you to know anything about Jeff's part in it unless you absolutely had to. It might have come out, you see. Jeff couldn't make up his mind. But 'louse' is way too strong. Jeff's easily led and Northcott obviously had him under his thumb. So I figured that, if Jeff were really going to sell his shares, I'd better buy them. Rather than let some stranger Northcott might dig up cut himself a piece of cake. Or, rather, a piece of change."

There was a soft warm light in Ede's eyes.

"The lady," she said, "is getting it at last. Naturally, you didn't want me to find out about all this and think—all the things I did think later on. So you went to a notary and made a statement to the effect that if Jeff's shares came to you, you intended transferring them to me. In other words, you were all set to double-cross Northcott, weren't you? As a favor to me, I've been looking for a word to describe you, Gil Summerfield. I can't be sure, but I think it's 'darling'."

Gil pressed the hand she'd given him gratefully.

"And then," he continued, "we all got out on Northcott's boat. You've got to remember, Ede, that I was still affecting to play ball with him. Well, he came to me. Very late that night. He was quite disturbed. He wanted me to use my influence with you, as an old friend of your family's. And then when I balked. And I balked especially because he finally came clean and told me exactly what he was going to do with your agency, if he got it."

"I must have handed him a jolt when I turned down his offer," said Ede. "He thought I wouldn't be able to refuse. But what was he going to do with the agency?"

"It's perfectly simple when you stop to think about it," Gil told her. "Northcott controls a lot of different advertising appropriations in that firm he's with. He's a big shot and he can throw that business anywhere he likes. Well, he gets a magnificent salary as advertising manager. But if he owned an advertising agency, he could gradually shift all the business into his own show. Naturally, he wouldn't own the agency openly. But he could get someone to front for him and be the power behind the throne. You understand don't you? He'd not only have his big salary, but he'd get the commission on all the money his firm spends for advertising. I'd be like owning a good fat gold mine. Lewis Northcott, Ede, is a very clever man. Not to say, unscrupulous."

EDE shook her head. "I guess I'm rather stupid. I ought to have guessed that myself. Well, what happened next, Gil?"

"We had a fight," Gil said. "I told him that, now I understood how things were, I wanted nothing to do with such a scheme. I said I was through and that he could get someone else to go in with him for this dirty work. It was—"

Gil laughed shortly. "Quite a good fight. And finally Northcott blew up altogether and ordered me off his boat. I was glad to go because..." He checked himself. "I guess we'll skip that."

"We're not going to skip anything," Ede said firmly.

"Well," Gil said, "do you remember that Winwood woman on the boat? It seems that once when she was dummy during the bridge game, she went on deck and... oh, it was just that when she came back, she—she said something that made me think you and Reagan were that way about each other."

all the men and guns the North Koreans had south of the 38th parallel in West Korea. Later they surrendered and were mopped up. General Kean sent out a third column—led by Lt. Col. John T. Corley who had won fame as the First division's "Fighting Irishman from Brooklyn" in Africa and Western Europe. He is from 308 Clinton street, in the borough of the Dodgers.

Corley and his column of Negro infantrymen followed Doan's path to Ynyong and then punched in a left hook through Namwon and over to the coast. On the way it liberated 91 American prisoners of war.

Grade School Teachers Air Problems

The first, second and third grade teachers of Garland, Brookwood and Palsley Schools met with Miss Neva Kennon, grade school coordinator, and James H. Jones, Superintendent of Hope Public Schools, at Brookwood Tuesday afternoon. The purpose of the conference was to discuss reading problems.

Quantities of materials concerning reading skills were supplied to the teachers. Among them were lists of "Evidences of Deficiency Diagnosis and Remedial Suggestion" from the Twenty-Fourth Year Book of National Society for the Study of Education: "Skills and Attitudes" Dr. Helen B. Sullivan of Boston University; and a Phonetic Chart giving consonants and consonants blends, vowels and diphthongs, and the formation of English sounds. The latter will be used by teachers with pupils who are unable to work out pronunciation of new words readily.

The sixth and seventh grades of Hope Public Schools met Wednesday afternoon with Miss Kennon at Garland. The topic of the conference was unification of the two grades so that children will have no or less trouble in adjusting when leaving grade school and entering junior high.

Joe Amour, principal of Oglesby Junior High, invited the sixth grades to visit the seventh grade in late spring. The date will be decided later.

Miss Kennon met with the first, second, and third grade teachers of Yergers Thursday afternoon. The group discussed reading problems. Materials concerning methods of teaching were distributed.

Following the conference the Yergers teachers displayed the posters and pictures which children had made commemorating Columbus Day and observing Fire Prevention Week.

French Fall Back in Indo-China

French troops, reeling from Communist blows near the Indo-China border, have withdrawn from the Red River delta and fallen back to a new defense line 27 miles farther south, French military headquarters announced today.

The Thai Nguyen fortress, a strong point on the roads north to Communist China and south into the Red River delta, was captured by the French Oct. 1 after a 36-hour amphibious operation by thousands of infantrymen and marines supported by planes. A French spokesman said it was "according to a prearranged plan" without any fighting. He said the French assault on it was designed to smash arms depots and other red installations. But it was pointed out that the French have been steadily pulling back from the northern frontier in the face of overwhelming numbers of Communist rebels, apparently armed and trained in Communist China.

Within recent days, about 3,000 French troops — half of them evacuated from the fortress of Chiening — have been lost in a Communist ambush near Thakhe, North of Thai Nguyen.

And despite the spokesman's assurance that there was "nothing new" to report elsewhere, rumors persisted here that serious Red activity was continuing along the Indo-China-Communist China border.

The new French line now is set up only 28 miles north of Hanoi, capital of Tonkin province and the Vietnam republic. Meanwhile, two scheduled meetings between French and Vietnamese Red Cross authorities on an exchange of wounded prisoners in the "no man's land" of Tonkin province have failed to materialize.

Anti-Trust Suit Filed Against Georgia Store

Washington, Oct. 11 — (AP) — Attorney General McGrath today announced a civil anti-trust action against the Savannah, Ga., cotton and Naval Stores Exchange, Inc., based on quotations on gum rosin and gum turpentine.

The announcement said the action was filed in the federal district court at Savannah.

The attorney general said the suit names seven corporations, in addition to the exchange, as defendants, accusing them of violating the anti-trust laws. The charge was conspiracy to fix the prices posted for rosin and turpentine on the Savannah Exchange and the prices at which crude gum, rosin and turpentine are purchased from farmers and central distilleries.

"An object of this suit," McGrath said, "is to assure that prices on the Savannah Exchange are arrived at through competition and not collusion."

'Home-Rule' to Be Issue of Municipal League

Little Rock, Oct. 12 — (AP) — The Arkansas Municipal league may decide what it'll do about "home rule" at its annual convention opening here today.

The league, composed of mayors and other city officials, had planned to propose a "home rule" amendment to the state constitution at the 1948 general election. The effort was abandoned when sufficient signatures to initiate the measure weren't obtained.

This year petitions were filed to initiate the amendment, but when their sufficiency was attacked in the Supreme court, the municipal league agreed the documents probably didn't have enough legal signatures. The plan, designed to give municipalities a greater share of self government, won't be on the November general election ballot.

One of the items scheduled for discussion at the convention is "home rule." The league may decide whether it'll continue or abandon its efforts.

Mayor G. B. Cousins of Biloxi, Miss., past president of Mississippi's municipal association, is among those scheduled to speak.

Mayor B. R. McCauley of Texarkana is president of the Arkansas league.

The convention will end tomorrow.

Teaching Firebug Tries to End Life

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 12 — (AP) — Thwarted in two police-described suicide attempts, a brilliant young teacher of Michigan State University faces arraignment in circuit court next week on an arson charge.

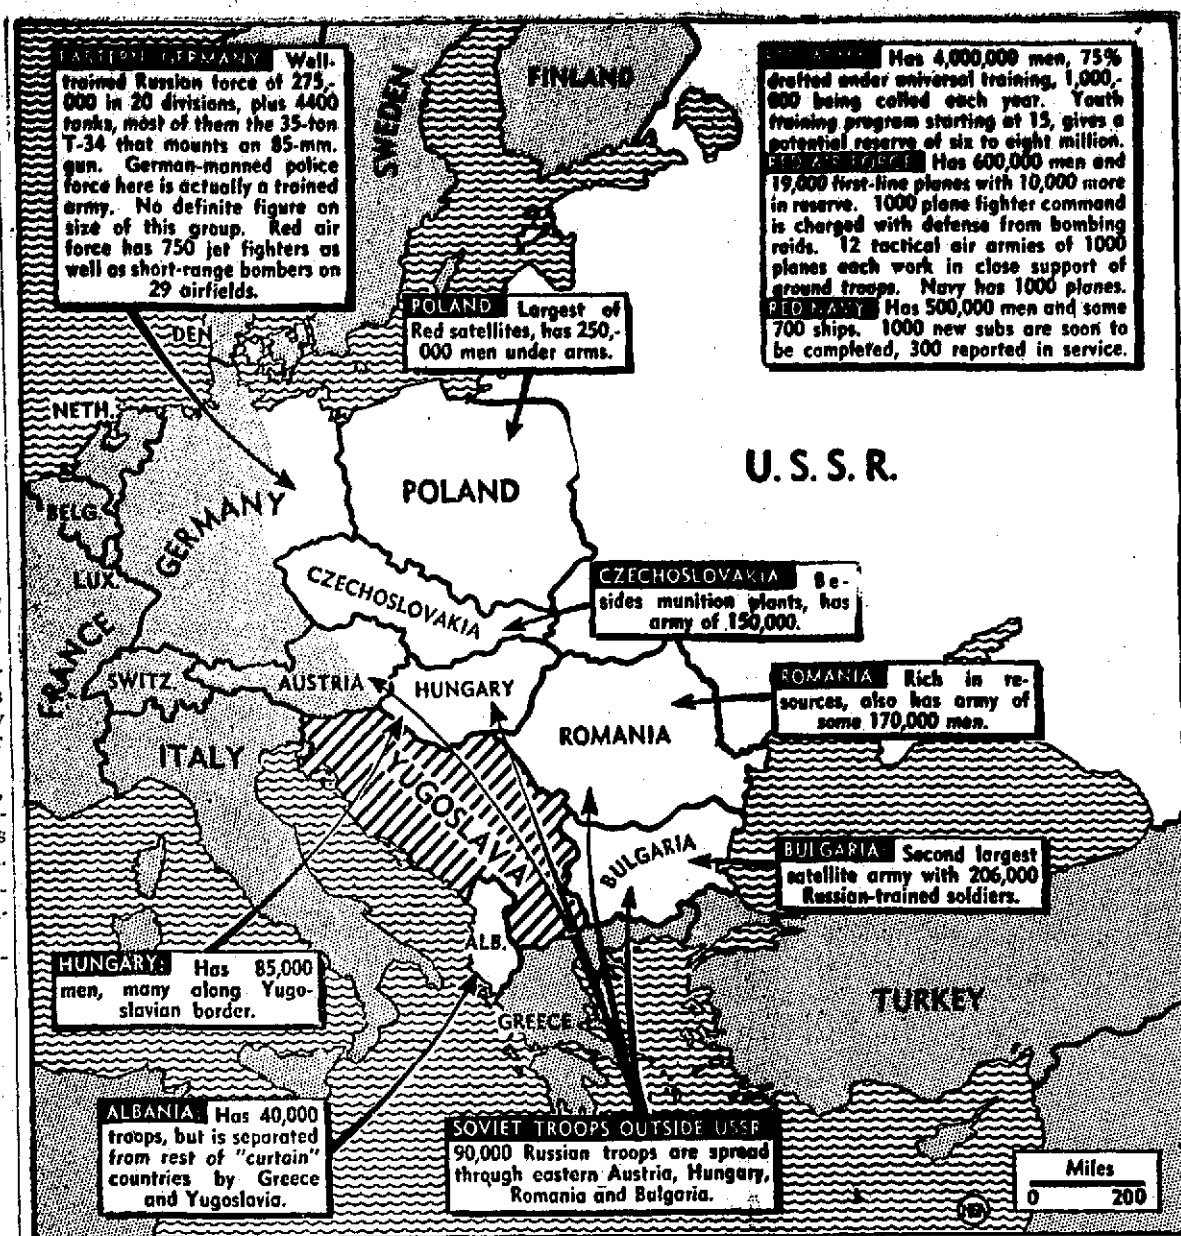

Robert H. Stacy, 30, called an outstanding scholar by his colleagues, admitted yesterday he set the fire that destroyed a university landmark last June 6. Ancient Haven Hall burned down at a loss of $818,000.

The tall, slender, dreamy-eyed instructor attempted to leap down a stairway yesterday after signing a confession in the prosecutor's office in a downtown building. Guards caught him in time to save him from falling three floors. In the Washtenaw county jail last suit names seven corporations, in addition to the exchange, as defendants, accusing them of violating the anti-trust laws.

The charge was conspiracy to fix the prices posted for rosin and turpentine on the Savannah Exchange and the prices at which crude gum, rosin and turpentine are purchased from farmers and central distilleries.

"An object of this suit," McGrath said, "is to assure that prices on the Savannah Exchange are arrived at through competition and not collusion."

Okay News

Mrs. Glenn Gathright, Mrs. John Russell, and Mrs. Lion Hughes were hostesses at a surprise birthday dinner on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Gathright for Mrs. Lonn Gathright on her 64th birthday.

Beautiful pink and red roses were placed at vantage points throughout the entire house.

The table covered with a lace cover was centered with a huge birthday cake decorated in pink and green with the words "Happy Birthday Mother" done in pink.

About 25 guests were present and each brought a covered dish. Upon the arrival of the honoree they all sang happy birthday after the many gifts were opened, dinner was served, after which jokes and visiting were enjoyed by all.

School seems to be the order of the day here now. Since the county fairs are over every one is really getting down to work.

Bro. Abner Reddin will fill his regular appointment at the Okay Baptist church on Thursday evening at 7:30.

There will be singing at the Okay church Sunday night Oct. 22, at 7:30. This is a regular 3rd Sunday affair and everyone has a cordial invitation.

Arkansas' Oldest Labor Dispute Is Settled

Jonesboro, Oct. 12 — (AP) — Arkansas' oldest labor dispute was settled today when a new contract was signed by the Pierce-Williams Co., a basket-making firm, and the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (AFL).

After signing the agreement, R. A. Pierce, company manager, and Charlie Mendenhall, union representative, announced the terms had been reached on wages, hours and conditions of employment. They did not elaborate.

About 180 basketmakers struck against the company here April 28, 1949. The company resumed operations several months ago but the strikers continued to maintain a picket line until this morning.

Finally Found Wake Is in Charge of CAA

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Oct. 13 — (P) — We finally woke somebody up about Wake Island. Took some banging on the door, though.

All we wanted to do was find out who had charge of it. Navy? Interior department? Who? Finally found out. You'd never guess.

You know Wake Island. Out in the Pacific. Place where President Truman and General MacArthur, it's rumored, will meet this weekend.

The U. S. owns it. Took it from Spain in 1898. Just a dot in the ocean. About 2,000 miles from Tokyo, 4,300 from San Francisco.

Was a navy coaling station one time. 4 1/2 miles long, 1 1/2 miles wide. Pan American Airways set up an airfield there in 1935.

It really got on the map and into the news on Dec. 8, 1941 when the Japanese attacked it, one day after attacking Pearl Harbor.

Remember it? Brigadier General (then major) James P. S. Devereux and a handful of marines defended it 14 days before they had to surrender.

Then this week, after President Truman said he'd meet MacArthur some place in the Pacific, we heard it rumored that the "some place" will be Wake.

My office heard about it. We called one of our men at the navy department and asked him if the navy has charge of Wake.

He checked and called back and said "nope." That the navy people thought that maybe the interior department has charge of Wake.

We called our man at the interior department. He checked there and called back. "Nope," he said. The interior people seemed to think the navy had it.

But navy had said no. Then somebody got the bright idea maybe the CAA has charge of it.

(That's the civil aeronautics administration which is one of the main bosses over American airlines, where they stop and fly.)

We knew some planes use Wake, commercial planes, that is. So we asked our man at CAA to see if CAA has charge of Wake. He checked.

Nope, he reported back. He said the CAA people thought it belonged to the navy.

At this point we began to get worried. Here was a piece of American real estate, but even though the lots there might not be worth as much as in downtown Washington, we figured it ought to have a landowner some place.

We didn't know where to go next but the next day our CAA man reported:

CAA people remembered they have charge of Wake, after all. Seems the navy turned it over to CAA in January, 1949.

And CAA employs a manager who is also a U. S. deputy marshal, a title and position which make him chief of police on the island, too.

And then we picked up some more tidbits about the place: All that was left there after the war were a concrete airport control tower and a 5,600-foot coral runway for planes.

The CAA rebuilt this into a 7,000-foot hard-surfaced strip, with a 1,400 foot coral extension. And now it's quite a busy place for planes. Yes, but what kind of hotel accommodations for the President and General MacArthur if they meet there?

So far as he knows, a CAA man told me, there are only five quonset huts on the place.

Then he has asked what arrangements were being made for

Wage Demand Hits Vital Industries

By The Associated Press

New pay raises in several industries were reported today in the wake of wage boost demands in the vital steel and railroad industries.

The pay raises came in maritime, clothing, brick, aviation, dairy, and plumbing supply industries in several cities.

Meanwhile a railway express strike in New York was settled but the Pittsburgh newspaper strike continued.

In steel, the CIO steelworkers and United States steel corporation planned to begin talks Monday on the union's demand for "a very healthy" wage boost.

In the railroad negotiations, firemen and engineers are asking 35 cents more an hour for 85,000 workers, and 15 other unions representing 1,000,000 workers are seeking 25 cents more.

Wage boosts were reported from these cities: New York — about 1,000 CIO radio operators and 12,000 marine engineers sailing ships out of Atlantic and gulf coast ports have won a pay boost of 6.38 per cent.

Boston — about 325,000 garment industry workers in the east were told their wages will go up 12 1/2 cents an hour next month.

Pittsburgh — the brick and clay workers in Pennsylvania, Missouri, Texas, Ohio and Kentucky plants.

Los Angeles — 11,170 CIO United Auto Workers at North American Aviation got a three year contract providing cost of living increases including a general boost of nine cents an hour. It is the aviation industry's first long term labor contract.

Louisville, Ky. — 620 dairy company employees got pay boosts that mean 40 cents more an hour to some of the AFL workers and possibly higher milk prices.

Chicago — Crane Company, which makes plumbing fixtures, gave most of its 6,500 Chicago plant workers a ten cents an hour pay increase in advance of reopening contracts with CIO steelworker and AFL teamster unions.

Canton, Ohio — the Hoover sweeper company gave pay raises to AFL production workers reported to have averaged eight cents an hour.

The 10 day old newspaper strike in Pittsburgh dragged on without new talks. But a railway express agency strike was reported ended in the New York — Jersey City area with an undisclosed settlement of the 17-day-old tieup of 3,000 AFL truck drivers and 4,000 other workers.

At Wood-Ridge, N. J., a wildcat strike made more than 7,000 workers idle for a third day at the Wright Aeronautical corporation plant where military aircraft engines are being made. CIO United Automobile workers seek higher pay.

Mother: "I object to those one-piece bathing suits."

Daughter: "But, mother, I really think I should wear something."

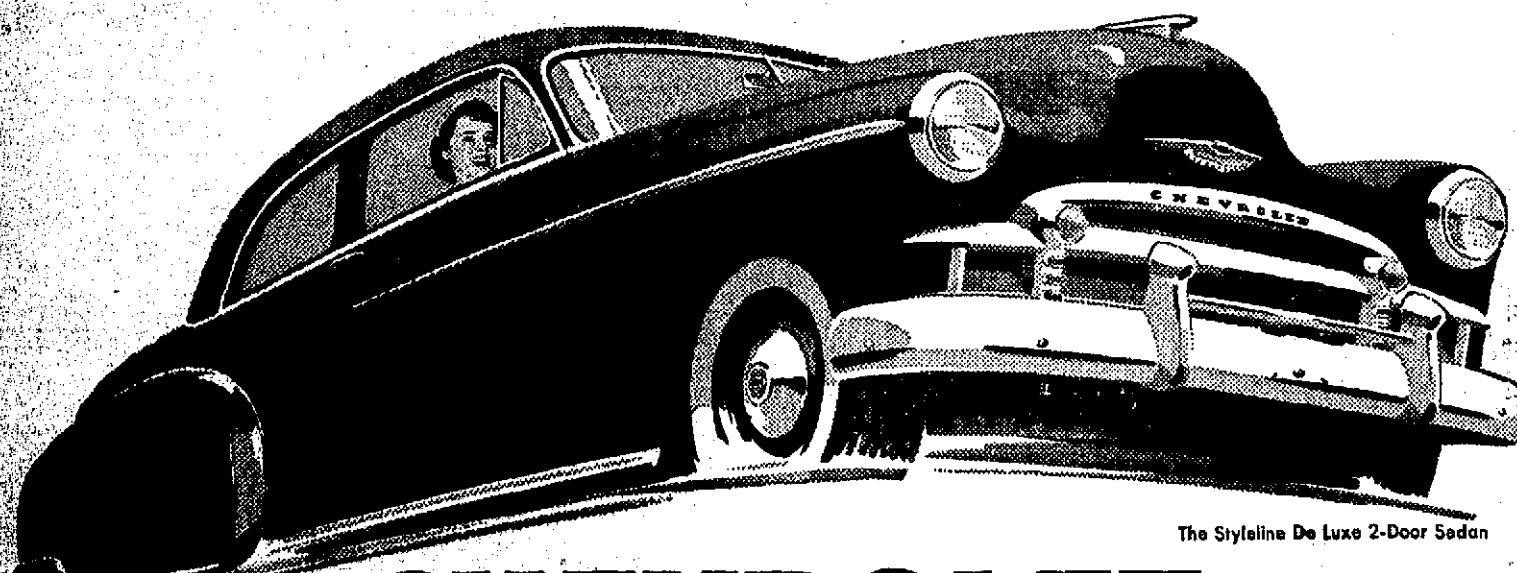

the meeting of the two important men.

"When we learned about the meeting, we gave instructions to set up a radio-teletype hookup."

Since the CAA man said the arrangements were being made, it seems certain that the President and the general are going to meet at Wake after all, although no one has said so officially.

In case you're wondering what Brigadier General Devereux is doing now, he's running for congress on the Republican ticket in Maryland.
